VETERANS LIKE COAST CLIMATE

Many Former Major League Stars Playing Fall Ball in Pacific Circuit

Vancouver, Sept. 19.—That the modern climate on the Pacific coast promotes the life of baseball players is proved by the fact that so many veterans who were unable to remain in the major leagues are getting in the line again in the Pacific Coast League.

A perusal of the league reveals a list of players who have served their time in the big show. Among the real veterans are "Lefty" Tom Hughes and "Doc" Crandall. Hughes pitched for three years, in 1917, 1918 and 1919 and then came to Minneapolis when played with Christy Mathewson, George White and Roger Bresnahan, one of the leading stars of the Los Angeles team. Hughes has been in the Pacific Coast League for three years, in 1917, 1918 and 1919 and then came to Minneapolis when played with Christy Mathewson, George White and Roger Bresnahan, one of the leading stars of the Los Angeles team.

MOTOR RUN FOR THIRTY DAYS

Jewett Engine Ran 12,204 Miles Without Stopping Once

Twelve thousand two hundred and four miles in thirty days without the motor being stopped—equal to two years of the hardest, most grueling service any car could be asked to render—that is the record of the performance of a standard stock Jewett touring car. This severe reliability and endurance run was staged by the Puljo-Jewett display showrooms for a total of almost 150 hours.

In the presence of a large crowd of persons the motor of this car was started, the hood was locked and sealed by General Stanley D. Butler, director of public safety in Philadelphia, and the switch was welded and sealed in place so that it could not be turned off. Then with the best wishes of the commissioner, the car was started on its long grid.

Although the motor was run continuously for 720 hours, the car made no trouble of any kind, and the record was set in a total of 150 hours.

Forty-one different drivers took turns at the wheel of the car, changing every eight hours, driving to the principal cities of four states. The car was out in 17 hours, running day and night over rough roads and congested highways, up steep hills and through deep mud.

Lady (relating price)—And how did you come to put in here, my good man?

"The lady," declared the imprisoned wine merchant, who was in a confidential mood. "One of my customers didn't go blind, and he identified me as American Legion Weekly."

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little 'Freezone' on an itching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with the 'Freezone' for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, both corns or corn between the toes, and the foot calms down without ointment or irritation.

Gabled Ends and Grouped Casements Feature This House for Narrow Lot

PLANS SUPPLIED

Detailed plans and specifications of this home may be obtained at low cost by writing to the Home Plan Editor of The Bulletin.

HALF-TIMBERS in an overhanging second story, and clipped gable ends, are picturesque features of this English house. Equally fascinating are its grouped casements, its tall chimney, and the severely formal entrance. Although there is a good porch at the rear, the main living porch is at the rear, an excellent idea where the front or side of the house is exposed to the afternoon sun. At the rear it is not at the mercy of passers-by or chance callers. Latticed columns add to the attractiveness of this spacious rear porch, which opens off both kitchen and dining-room, making it a desirable place for dining in warm weather.

This plan could be used on a narrow lot. The arrangement of rooms is excellent. The hall on one side can be reached from the kitchen without passing through other rooms, and joins with the grade and basement entry. French doors are pleasantly used between the hall and living-room and between the living-room and dining-room. The long row of casements at the rear of the living-room invites a comfortable seat. Built-in bookcases are provided, in balanced arrangement at each side of the second story which leads to the side porch. In the dining-room there is a corner china cabinet at each side of the French doors, making a beautiful room-and-farm. Place is provided in the compact kitchen for sink and drain-board work table, range, refrigerator and a large built-in dresser.

The housewife will be pleased with the desirable wall space in the kitchen, permitting her to change the arrangement of the furniture now and then. She will be pleased, too, with the good-sized closets, the tray case in one room, and the linen closet near the bathroom.

If your lot has a view from the rear, this six-room house would be a wise choice, for it is planned for just such a location. To cost approximately $1,535, figured at 21 cents a cubic foot.

DRAMATIC STORYPeerless Flapper Changes
Ways in "Flirting With Love"

"Flirting With Love," the first National comedy-drama, featuring Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle, which is to be shown next week at the Capitol Theatre, starting Thursday is based on the theory that certain persons have in reality two distinct personalities.

When Robert Louis Stevenson published his "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which treated of a man who periodically changed from a mild tender-hearted physician to a homicidal brute, despite ridicule of the author's declaration that such phenomena existed.

Students of psychology have since discovered that dual personality is not at all uncommon. Recently several cases have come to the attention of the scientific world to bear out the theory. One of the most famous was that of a woman in New Orleans whose mental aspect completely overtook, transforming her into an entirely different person, with changed

"The best bill of the season" is perhaps a hackneyed phrase, but when it is applied to the bill for Pantages, it is not without justification. The great climax of the play is reached when the five Maxwell's are featured. The play is a series of vignettes, each dealing with a different historical character. ## UNFAVORABLE WEATHER CAUSES ANOTHER JUMP IN WHEAT PRICES

Shippers and Millers Fair Buyers. Exporters Contend Winnipeg Prices are Too High in Comparison With Other Markets. Pressure has been Very Light

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19.—The unfavorable change in weather conditions over the Canadian west, the weather map showing rain over Saskatchewan and Alberta, light showers in western Manitoba, and the forecast predicting unsettled weather throughout the prairie provinces, with possibilities of frost in Alberta caused "SHAGBEE" to make a move today, and finding offering of wheat very scarce, with buying in October difficult, prices advanced, the nearby future showing a gain of nearly three cents over the previous close at the high point. During midmorning profit-taking by "LAWNS" caused a temporary speculative tendency but offerings were easily absorbed and the market soon recovered finally closing 2 1/2 higher for October, while the more distant futures were also higher but did not show the same relative strength as October.

The feature was the narrowing of the contract, with only one month and a half of the close today. The market was very active, with buyers and sellers, but exporters, it is claimed, that they are not in a position to sell wheat in the near future. ## P. Burns Company Ship Five Carloads Butter to England

The P. Burns Company of Edmonton shipped five carloads of butter from Edmonton to the old country markets this week. This company has been shipping fairly large quantities of butter to the old country markets and reports that the demand for the product from Alberta, is very small. The market at the present time is not quite as strong as it was some time ago, but there has been a fair demand for all that can be shipped.

Life's Little Comedies

The Threshing Season at
Birdseye CenterTHE SECOND FALSE ALARM SINCE
10.30 A.M.Did You Know Canada Has Political Scouts?
They're Going Out to Test Popularity of M.P.'s

By JOHN LANDELS LOVE

WITHIN the next few weeks a number of staid, elderly gentlemen will pack their grips and disappear into various parts of the country districts on mysterious errands. Most of them will carry light cases containing samples and catalogues, for they are going to call on every cross roads store, general store, garage, smithy, hotel, hardware, druggist, grocery and drug store in the extensive territory to be covered. Their objective is the obtaining of certain reliable information for their real employers, and their perfectly genuine samples, catalogues and price lists, provided by manufacturers and wholesalers in all good faith and with a total ignorance of their subsidiary uses, are so much disguise to enable the elderly gentlemen to pursue their mysterious calling without fear of detection.

There is an air of delicate secretiveness about these elderly gentlemen. When at home, they are to be found living at good class boarding houses. For months they do nothing, but inactivity does not appear to cause them any financial embarrassment. They never discuss their business, and for the most part their fellow-boarders regard them as gentlemen of independent means, or possibly the recipients of comfortable pensions. Then suddenly they exhibit a strange activity, and if their designs were carefully noted, it would be found that they were negotiating with manufacturers for "side lines" to sell on commission. They experience little difficulty in securing the interest of several good houses, for their testimonials are of the best, having secured a sufficient number of lines to provide them with a pretext for calling on every conceivable business man in their territory, including doctors, dentists and ministers, their efforts and are seen no more on the porch of their boarding houses for six or eight weeks.

It will be discovered, further, by a close observer, that these elderly men become glibly involved in activity whenever a crisis becomes acute in the affairs of whatever government happens to be in power in Ottawa. Having no political leanings of their own, they have developed a peculiar sensitiveness concerning the political opinions of others. The merest hint of a general election, or suggestion of new and important legislation, sends them from their

FINIS

HE WENT out into the world and made his mark. His name became a target for envy. And now he has gone back to the beginning: He is a politician. They greet him with the same reverence: "Hello, Johnny!" He is a politician. For with all his importance he has not acquired sufficient humor to save him from the spectacle of the old actor. Who still would strut. Though the play be ended. —La Barre Cooke, in Contemporary Verse.

Mature and Diplomatic They Range Through Rural Riding in Guise of Traveling Salesmen—Find Out How People Stand and Report to M.P.'s Who Employ Them—They Are Getting Ready to Test Opinion on Federal Politics

STUPID, converts them into singularly keen and observant individuals, and sends them out post haste to sell anything and everything to Tom, Dick and Harry up and down the countryside. For these superannuated gentlemen are political scouts. They are one of the surest means whereby members of parliament for country constituencies are able to "keep their ears to the ground." Rightly or wrongly, a great many gentlemen whose present address is Ottawa, and who do not wish to trouble the post office to redirect any of the mail for a long time to come, are apprehensive that a general election looms ahead. Naturally, like Rosa Darie, in "David Copperfield," they "want to know, you know" how the cat is likely to jump when the free and independent voters head for the polling booth. There are numerous superficial methods of arriving at a guess, but guessing is not good enough for the M.P. who knows his business. The local weekly newspaper gives a hint or two, but the editor is generally a partisan one way or the other, and his conclusions are seldom unbiased. Blarney supporters in the various ridings provide information, more or less—generally less. Their leanings are known to all, and many of their neighbors take delight in misleading them. It is only here and there that the most experienced observer is able accurately to gauge the constantly changing political situation in his own home constituency. Least valuable of all is the personal tour of the sitting member or prospective candidate. The least optimistic will obtain from such a journey convinced that his chances of success are of the remotest possible. Everybody, except open and avowed opponents, will assure him confidently that his triumphant return is "a sure thing."

Experienced parliamentarians know the generally unreliable nature of all such sources of information. The only way they could get at the unbiased truth would be for them to travel over their constituencies in impenetrable disguise, with or without whiskers, and by diplomatic investigation, get at the real situation. Obviously this method is impracticable, and so recourse is had to the trained services of the elderly men mentioned. Several members of parliament of the same political faith whose seats adjudge, or are conversely close together, combine to employ one of these gentlemen. Cases are known where actors successfully serve two masters: one a Liberal and the other a Conservative. Being trained, accurate and unprejudiced observers of political opinion, these men are able to furnish frank, direct, and completely reliable information to both sides.

Such a scout, representing three, four or as many as six constituencies is in receipt of a comfortable combined salary from these employers, and whether he sells goods or not on his journey of investigation is a matter of small concern to him. He endeavors, however, to sell as much as he can, because his samples and catalogues are a disguise that must be kept as effective as possible. The companies who are ostensibly responsible for the scout's salary are in fact, however, and are content to have him sell their products "on the side" in territory where they could not otherwise afford to be represented.

When he has covered his ground thoroughly, the scout makes out his report, one for each of his Ottawa employers. Needless to say, these documents are carefully scrutinized by the men for whom they are prepared. They constitute the most reliable information of the political situation in their constituencies, and not one of the members concerned would dream of deciding his future action without first absorbing and weighing every fact, suggestion and intimation conveyed to him by his scout.

Far From Perfect

A BOY concluded his first attempt at story-writing as follows: "This is my last attempt at writing a tale, and it is far from being perfect, but if I have indeed failed to see that in cases out of 10 they can either make life as barren as the desert of Sarah or as joyous as a flower garden my object will have been accomplished. Adieu!"

Losing Balance

JACK: Yes, I had a little balance in the bank, but I got engaged two months ago, and now—
MURIEL: Ah, love makes the world go round. Jack: Yes, but I didn't think it would go round so fast as to make me lose my balance.

Why He Lost Out

Jay Walkers are Not All Like This Chap, of Course

LOOK at him," said Tom Harrison this morning.
"The 'him' in the case was crossing the street in the midst of the early morning automobile traffic. Halfway across he stopped to light a cigar. In one hand he carried a newspaper, turned to the financial column.

"Either he is a man who can concentrate to the last degree," said Harrison. "Or else he's a plain fool. It is important for me to know which."
It happened that Harrison wanted a man to fill an important post in his organization. The "him" was referred to was under consideration. His office record was good and he was well dressed and snappy. But he was a Jaywalker.

"There is no shoddy rule for Jaywalkers," said Harrison. "None are men of extraordinary power. Others have feathers in their hair. I must know which category he comes in."

Any traffic policeman will tell you that the confirmed Jaywalkers are either old ladies—male or female—who haven't brains enough to know better, nervous cases who cannot hold themselves, or worried men who think about office business at the wrong time. But they agree that there is something wrong with Jaywalkers. Somehow they do not function. There is a rusty spot on their mental mechanism.

Tom Harrison followed "him" on his way down the street. Two minutes after the Jaywalker had crossed the street he stopped in front of a store window to watch a man demonstrate a new razor sharp.

Right there he lost a better job than he ever had in all his life.

Fewest Possible Words

"Now my good woman," said the learned judge, "you must give an answer in the fewest possible words of which you are capable, to the plain and simple question whether, when you were crossing the street with the baby on your arm, and the omnibus was coming down on the right side and the cab on the left and the brougham was trying to pass the omnibus, you saw the plaintiff between the brougham and the cab, or whether and when you saw him at all, and whether or not near the brougham, cab and omnibus, or either, or any two and which of them respectively, or how it was?"

Phantom Planes

LONG-RANGE guns have now been rendered as obsolete as horns and arrows, according to the inventor of a new phantom aeroplane which has been developed by the French army. This new aeroplane, which has been nicknamed the "ghost" or "phantom" plane, is steered and operated by wireless. It can be sent hundreds of miles over enemy territory to drop bombs on any given spot.

It is claimed that these phantom aeroplanes can be steered with absolute precision from afar of an army, from wireless stations, or by an airplane in another machine. They are steered by aeroplane, and the planes can be made to rise to any given altitude and remain there.

If all that is claimed for the phantom plane is correct, a new terror has been added to warfare.

The Famous Creator of Fashions

FROCKS for early Fall show certain definite trends, summed up in the shorter skirt, the longer tunic treatment and the long sleeve. There are other features which show variations, such as necklines, beltlines and the wide scope in fabrics used. These latter notes furnish interesting variety: they are the kind that go to make each frock different.

For instance, the neckline may be a bateau, it may be a deep-cut V or it may show the rounded line. Some of the V necks are finished with tailored lapels, others are devoid of collar and have an attached tab of the material which may be wrapped about the neck in scarf fashion. Still other V necklines reveal a crossed-over vest of dainty white or cream batiste. The square neck, too, comes in for its share of importance. And many of the frocks whose necklines are low-cut add an interesting touch in a velvet and organdie collarlette worn tight about the bare neck.

The general style of the early Fall frock is short and slim, but there is a tendency to more ease in the cut of skirts. This is provided by full inset godets or sloping side seams which allow increased ease for walking and still preserve the narrow straight appearance. Where inserted godets appear, they are most often at the sides, sometimes in front, but never at the back of the frock. Backs are invariably straight and slim.

The long sleeves are quite often tight, but on occasion they veer decidedly from this straight slim course and widen into full affairs that come in to a narrow cuff. Of such inspiration is the dress sketched at the left. The straight little skirt is black broadcloth, while the blouse top is of black velvet showing big wide sapphire blue crepe sleeves. Blue and gold Chinese embroidery embellishes the model, and the big hat is sapphire blue velvet.

Big hats, by the way, will be smart for special afternoon occasions, and velvet is a favored medium. The small hat is too firmly entrenched to be pushed aside in favor of the mode for big hats, so the small model remains the thing for general day wear. It shows the higher crown and almost any brim except the now passe cloche type. Turbans are also smart.

The tunic dress, second from the left, is of broadcloth in the new burnt russet tone that is so prevalent this Fall. This orange-brown hue seems especially suited to the Fall season, and the vividly colored dress with its blending of brown in hat and fur makes a delightful costume for wear at any time of day.

To the right of this is an afternoon outfit combining the black and white that has been so strongly sponsored in Paris openings. The white broadcloth and black velvet combination is stunning with its trimming touches of skunk fur. The little tight-fitting hat is of black velvet.

At the extreme right of the page is a chic little dress of navy gabardine, devoid of trimming except that furnished by the unusual collar band which is matched by the flat cloth girdle.

One large flat pearl gray button appears on the collar and another at the girdle. The big hat is black velvet.

Buttons are an important trimming item. They appear in all sizes, either big buttons sparingly used or tiny buttons used by the dozens. The latter treatment is effective in a cloth frock with long, tight sleeves and on each sleeve a single line of tiny buttons from shoulder to wrist.

featured. An interesting little dress which illustrates this use of embroidery is made of black satin with a dainty front apron and tiny square bib that laps up on the bodice. A normal waistline, shirred at either hip, gives a certain piquancy to the frock. The V neck, short sleeves and entire apron are outlined with dainty colored wool embroidery.

Another use of embroidery is prominent in a little frock of the tunic variety that was much featured at Deauville. The dress was interpreted for Summer resort wear in white kasha, with a narrow little skirt just escaping beneath the long, slim tunic. A wide band of embroidery in red and blue wool extended up the back, ending just between the shoulders. This is seen in navy or beige or burnt russet for Fall, with the embroidery in smart contrasting colors.

Another effective Fall model is of green kasha with white plaited crepe let in down the center front.

The redingote tunic is another smart note which is lovely in fine French serge or silk serge, worn over a foundation skirt of satin. A stunning tunic of navy blue silk serge has turned back lapels to finish its V neckline and opens down the front over a straight black satin slip. The redingote is rather full, and a sash confines it at a lowered waistline.

With this is worn a cunning little black satin hat, embroidered all over in gay colors. The hat is soft and fits the head snugly except for a little upstanding cuff that adorns the front.

These little all-over-embroidered hats of satin will be very smart for early Fall. They divide popularity with the soft little felt hats that are not bound at the edges, but are simply cut and often turned back becomingly from the face. Sometimes the brim is cut at the side or back into pointed strips that are tied in a loose knot with the ends left to stick up in the jaunty angle. The French are also favoring soft little hats that turn up at the front. A chic red felt is turned back from the face and adorned with bunches of red feathers, one at either side of the crown.

smart and is often used in combination with
